

Sarah Johnson – Elective Week 2.

Hello!

Last weekend my family took me to do some exploring of the local area, including The Illawarra and The Southern Highlands. We did a tree top walk through the rainforest, but unfortunately it was a bit misty, as you can see from the photos. Usually, you can see the lake and the see from the top, but not to worry.

On Sunday, we headed to Fitzroy Falls in the Budderoo National Park, and thanks to all the rain we've had (I feel very at home!), they were flowing beautifully!

This week at work, I've been continuing to rotate around the specialties. I've seen some paediatric surgery, as well as neurosurgery, during which the patient was awake. I found this really interesting– I did my neurology and neurosurgery block in Ysbyty Gwynedd in Bangor, where we had a visiting neurologist once a week and no neurosurgery, so being in a big centre is quite a change!

This week, I also got to do a presentation to the anaesthetic trainees about my work I've done with maternal sepsis, which went down really well and ties in with current work on infection rates here.

I think that's all for this week!

Sarah
